THE WINADU BUGLER vs. THE WINADUDE

The Bugler is on a hot streak! First, he picked against the Yankees. Then, he picked Michael Jordan and the Wizards to make the playoffs. While the Wizards aren't quite there yet, they seem to be headed in the right direction. The Bugler also picked Miami to win the Rose Bowl. Can The Bugler extend his hot streak or is the Winadude due for a victory?

WHO WILL WIN THE SUPER BOWL?

The Bugler says:

“Ride the Bus to the Big Easy”

Now that the NFL Playoff picture is in focus (Jets in, Giants out; Pats in, Colts out; Bears in, Vikes out), and all the dominant teams are appearing in the NFC, watch out for the Yellow & Black from Steeltown. No one is talking about Kordell, Gildon, Bettis and Cowher. Watch out NFC, these guys are for real! They are very efficient and run the ball very effectively. I know "The Bus" has been hurt, but the bye week will give him a chance to reload and rev up for a Super Bowl run. Kordell has big game experience (he has already been in an AFC Championship game) and Cowher is the best motivator and coach in the NFL. While all the attention is on the big boys in the NFC (Rams, Bears, Packers, 49ers), the Steelers are going to waltz through the AFC and be rested and waiting for an injured and weak NFC opponent.

Remember, a tough defense and a strong rushing attack wins championships (see the '00 Ravens) and the Steelers are the best at both. Look for Yellow & Black confetti in the air on Feb. 3 in New Orleans!!!

The Winadude says:

“The Rams will be the Best in the Bayou”

The Greatest Show on Earth will not be denied their second Super Bowl in three years. The Rams have the best offense in the history of the NFL. With MVP Kurt Warner guiding the troops, there is no stopping the Ram offense. Marshall Faulk is the game's best running back and Torry Holt and Isaac Bruce combine to make the best wide receiver tandem in the NFL. The Rams toyed with many teams this year and they are peaking at the right time.

Now, I know what the Bugler will say. No Defense! Well, let's look at the statistics. The Rams gave up an average of 279 yards per game, ranking second in the NFL. The Rams made some outstanding off season moves. They acquired perennial pro bowler Aeneas Williams and drafted LB Tommy Polley and S Adam Archuleta. Adding that to London Fletcher and Grant Wistrom has solidified the Rams defense.

It's a simple formula: Take the best offense ever and add it to the second best defense in the league and you have a Super Bowl champion. The question should not be if they will win this year's Super Bowl. The question should be how many Super Bowls will they win.
